Pablo Martín de Agüero Pablo Martín de Agüero y Martínez (1775-1849) was an Argentine politician. Agüero was born in Buenos Aires, the son of Spanish soldier José Agüero Martínez and Rosarina de Lacaz Martínez. Agüero married Lorenza Cossío de la Rosa and had six children with her. With her he had another two children: José María Lacaz de Agüero and Juan Lacaz de Agüero. The latter was the grandfather of the painter Carlos Lacaz de Agüero. After the death of his first wife, Lorenza, Agüero married Rosario Cossío de la Rosa; they had two children: Francisco (Adhemar) and Pablo (Francisco). After his death, Rosario remarried José Julián de Lafría. What causes them? The physician shares at the beginning of their report that the woman they are treating has had recurrent spinal fractures since birth, although she has no history of similar injuries. Do you know what causes such recurrent spinal fractures? The chart shows that the woman has low blood pressure and there is lumbar lordosis of the lumbar spine. Her low blood pressure is worrisome, as it indicates dehydration. If the underlying cause of this woman's low blood pressure is inflammation, it would indicate a treatable condition. I prescribe a drug called enalapril. Can it help? It's an ACE inhibitor. It can help. Does it help the low blood pressure, the chronic inflammation, or both? With both conditions we have the chronic inflammation and the low blood pressure. Both conditions are likely to respond to enalapril. The low blood pressure is worrisome, however. The chart shows the woman has a pulse of about 80, a possible sign of a problem with her circulation. If you know it's coming from an internal cause, enalapril is a reasonable choice to be made for the acute condition. If the cause is atherosclerosis, however,
