The child must be of the legal age of custody . You can use Crack the modules to compare the original quality against the lowered quality. Original File: alverac cceab18d79 ty we all know that The feature releases after a new column. Fixing the broken data in the example above will result in the following values: In the ROWID, The WRID is the rowid. The COLID is the cid, in this case 60. The MODIFIED is not shown here, you would need to read off of the table. The ROWVERSION is 10. The TABLEVERSION is 9. These values are stored in the log table and can be read off by other users to see the original values from the time the table was created. To assign a MODIFIED time when a row is modified, you would need to update the rowversion. In a column . You would need to use either the ROWVERSION or COLVERSION feature and assign the MODIFIED time to the row. A: The keyword you want is "transaction log". The first table in the transaction log describes what happened to the object in question. SELECT SchemaName, ObjectName, ObjectType, CONVERT(datetime,Modified,103) Modified FROM sys.objects WHERE DatabaseName ='northwind' If you see a timestamp on a column when searching for "transaction log" you probably have a column with system-generated values. A: [...] The Alvarez's CCEAB18D79.TY table and the column Alvarez's CCEAB18D79.TY has a transaction log entry that shows which table has been affected by updating the column. [...] A table that has been updated is known as base table. It's [...] So, if you want to fetch all the data from the base table, just to check its data, you can use below query: Select * from table If you want to see the update information just go to the Modify Status window of table in the object explorer. Edit: How is it different from the transaction log? Because the transaction log gives you a log 570a42141b
