About Me Purrint is a snipping tool that enhances the features of the standard Windows print screen utility. As you probably know by now, almost every keyboard in the world comes with a "print screen" key that's supposed to let you take advantage of the print screen feature integrated into Windows. The purpose of this lightweight application is actually very simple: it enhances the overall functionality of this particular tool by offering users a great pack of features, such as auto-saving and auto-printing. First of all, Purrint places an icon in the Windows System Tray that provides access to the configuration screen, but also lets you take a screenshot with a single click or open the previously-made screen capture. The options menu however allows you to set up the auto-save feature, which automatically saves a new screenshot in a user-defined folder. The application supports three different formats, namely JPG, BMP and PNG. What's more, Purrint can also copy the screenshot to clipboard all by itself every time the print screen button is pressed or even print it

With KEYMACRO, you can use your keyboard as a macro-recorder to save and edit text. When you are ready to use the recorded macros, simply press F5 on your keyboard. An easy-to-use macro recorder, KEYMACRO lets you capture text from any application running on your computer. From there, you can edit and save macros, which are stored in.xmlfiles in the Desktop folder. The macros can be used for any program that lets you record keystrokes. You can also copy text into the clipboard, but this can be dangerous, because you cannot be sure that the text you enter will not be saved to a file somewhere on your hard drive. So, it's better to use it on a user-defined macro rather than on the system clipboard. In addition, macros can be used in a new window by using the Command key. To use this feature, select the text and press Shift+Command+W. KEYMACRO is available in multiple languages.
